Notes on Contributors

Joyce Sparer ADLER taught at the University of Guyana between 1963 and 1969. She is the author of Attitudes towards 'Race' in Guyanese Literature, many essays on Wilson Harris and on Melville, a book, War in Melville's Imagination, and a trilogy of 'Melville Plays'. She is Past President of the Melville Society.

Al CREIGHTON, a playwright, director and critic, is a member of the Faculty of Arts at the University of Guyana. He is a graduate of UWI. He has researched oral literature and theatre as an ACU fellow at Ibadan and Ife and is also writing on Caribbean drama and oral traditions.

David DABYDEN, a Guyanese poet, is the author of Slave Song and Coolie Odyssey. He has also written Hogarth's Blacks, Images of Blacks in Eighteenth-Century English Art as well as several handbooks on West Indian and Black British Literature. He lectures in Caribbean Studies at the University of Warwick and is the director of its Centre for Research in Asian Migration.

Fred d'ACQUIAR is a Guyanese poet, author of Mama Dot. He won the first Guyana Prize for poetry in 1987. He is writing a doctoral dissertation on Wilson Harris's fiction.

Marc DEIREZ did an M.A. at the University of Adelaide. He is now a research assistant at the University of Liège and is writing a doctoral dissertation on the post-colonial novel, mainly on the fiction of David Malouf, Janet Frame and Wilson Harris. He has published articles on Stow, Malouf and Frame.

Jean-Pierre DURIX is professor of English at the University of Dijon and editor of Commonwealth. His latest book, The Writer Writeth: The Artist and Creation in the New Literatures in English, was published by Greenwood Press in 1987. He has written many essays on Wilson Harris and translated into French Palace of the Peacock, The Secret Ladder and The Angel at the Gate. He is at present working on a comparative study of the relationship between realism and fantasy in the New Literatures in English.

Mary Lou EMERY took a Ph.D. in modern thought and literature at Stanford University and is now associate professor at the University of Iowa. She is the author of Jean Rhys at 'World's End': Novel of Colonial and Sexual Exile (1990). She is currently working on a series of essays dealing with the 'primitive' and 'feminine' in the fiction of early modernists and is interested in tropes of sexual difference in West Indian narratives of decolonization.
