Meet the local organisers

Dear colleague

Welcome to Universität Hamburg. At this challenging time for European and global politics, we are delighted to share an exciting academic programme with you.

The Roundtables discuss current fragmentations of governance and of social cohesion, highlighting some of the research concerns of Hamburg's political science department. The Roundtable Multilateralism in Crisis, convened by Andreas von Staden, addresses the causes and consequences of current moves towards a neo-Westphalian order, with greater emphasis again on the role of the nation states as the principal units of decision-making. At the same time, democratic nation states in Europe and elsewhere are facing populist and authoritarian challenges. The Roundtable Cosmopolitan Metropolis and Parochial Hinterlands: A New Social Cleavage?, convened by Kai-Uwe Schnapp, looks for explanations.

Thursday’s plenary lecture by Rainer Forst, winner of a Leibniz prize from the Deutsche Forschungsgemeinschaft and co-director of the Frankfurt-based Cluster of Excellence ‘Normative Orders’, reflects the rising importance that the subdiscipline of political theory has had within the European research community. Entitled Normativity and Reality: Thinking Politically about Politics, it will discuss what a ‘realistic’ understanding of power entails for political science. The lecture will be followed by a reception inside and outside the University’s modernist Audimax lecture hall, witness to the 1968 student protests and place of origin to its famous slogan Unter den Talaren, der Muff von 1000 Jahren (Under the gowns, a thousand-years’ stench). Gown-wearing in German universities never recovered.

Universität Hamburg is currently preparing its centennial celebrations. It was founded, along with the first German democracy, in 1919. With 43,000 students, it is one of the largest universities in Germany. Its department of social sciences is housed in a former coach and horses stables on Allende Platz, in the shadow of no synagogue on the adjacent Joseph Carlebach Platz. It is located in the former Jewish Grindel area that bears the marks of its Jewish emancipation as well as persecution history.

Hamburg’s first Chair in political science was founded in 1951 and held by Siegfried Landshut, discoverer and editor of Marx’s 1844 Paris Manuscripts. Today, the political science institute has around 30 academic staff, including eight professors and junior professors. It offers a political science MA with special emphasis on area studies and international political theory, while also contributing to a politics, economics and philosophy MSc programme. Our Faculty for Economics and Social Sciences is one of the University’s largest, with 80 professors, 250 other academic staff, and around 6,000 students at BA and MA/MSc level. Its Graduate School confers around 60 doctoral degrees each year.

The Von Melle Platz Campus hosts our conference. It lies in the heart of a vibrant and conflictive city, at the intersection between its bourgeois and bohemian quarters. To the south, the University area borders the Schanze district, home to the Rote Flora, one of the oldest squats in the Republic, and to the Southwest, the Planten un Blomen park. If you find the time, explore the city’s cutting edge music scene, whether in the Astra-Stube or Elbphilharmonie. We wish you a great conference and a memorable stay in Hamburg.

Welcome to Hamburg! Welcome to Universität Hamburg – the largest university in this city, one of the biggest in Germany, and a major science and research hub in Europe.

Hosting Europe’s most prestigious annual political science conference is a great honour for us. Having the chance to greet so many international scholars from all areas of the discipline and across all career stages is something very special.

And, as is well known, third time is a charm! Hamburg is the third German city to host the ECPR’s General Conference. In 2009 it was Potsdam and fifteen years ago it was Marburg. What a good omen for this year’s event.

Especially in times of growing political instability, such meetings have an invaluable impact. They are an ideal platform for discussions and debates. Here, new ideas can be exchanged and the co-operation among scholars can be intensified on an international basis. Good to know that internationality is one of Hamburg’s main assets. For centuries, our town has been known as the ‘gateway to the world’.

In recent decades, however, Germany’s second largest city has also emerged as a central point for scholars in the field of political science and consulting – thanks to the Universität Hamburg, the Institute for Peace Research and Security Policy (IFSH), the German Institute of Global and Area Studies (GIGA) and the Carl Friedrich von Weizsäcker-Centre for Science and Peace Research (ZNF), to mention but a few. Hamburg’s unique interdisciplinary degree programme, our Master of Peace and Security Studies, should not be forgotten.

In short, much has already been accomplished. Now, it’s time to pave the way for the future. The 12th ECPR General Conference is an excellent opportunity to do so. Network, increase the number of international co-operations, create new research clusters and thus become more visible throughout the world. Together!

So go ahead, immerse yourself in this year’s programme – but please don’t forget to look around and enjoy our bustling big city that is home to more bridges than Venice, Amsterdam and London all together – and one of Europe’s busiest harbours.

I wish you a successful conference, an enjoyable stay, and many happy returns to Hamburg!

Katharina Fegebank
Second Mayor and Minister for Science, Research and Equalities Hamburg
Dear colleagues

On behalf of the ECPR, we would like to welcome you to our General Conference, which this year features 78 Sections, 520 Panels and over 2,300 Papers. The varied programme includes Roundtables, Receptions, Featured Panels, and a Plenary Lecture by eminent scholar Rainer Forst, Normativity and Reality: Thinking Politically About Politics.

The Conference has established itself as the largest regular event for European political science, with more than 2,500 participants and steadily growing submissions for Sections, Panels and Papers. Calls for next year’s conference, at the University of Wroclaw, go out on 15 September. We are very grateful to all those involved in the organisation of this event. Our special thanks go to the Section Chairs, the local organisers, and to ECPR staff, in particular Louise Soper and Diane Towler. We wish you all a great conference!

Klaus Goetz
University of Munich
Former member, ECPR Executive Committee

Maurizio Carbone
University of Glasgow
ECPR Executive Committee

Klaus Goetz’s work focuses on comparative politics and public policy, with a special interest in the analysis of political time. He is currently engaged in two major research projects, both funded by the German Research Foundation, that examine budgeting in international organisations and resource mobilisation for international refugee policy, respectively. He recently co-edited (with Ronny Patz) a special issue of the journal Global Policy on ‘Resourcing International Organizations’.

Klaus was local organiser of the 2009 ECPR General Conference in Potsdam and has been co-editor of the journal West European Politics (Taylor & Francis) since 2000.

Maurizio Carbone (right) is Professor of International Relations & Development and Jean Monnet Professor of EU External Policies at the University of Glasgow.

He has taught previously at the University of Pittsburgh, Carnegie Mellon University, Duke University, Johns Hopkins Bologna, University of Rome Tor Vergata, and has held official visiting research positions at the Université Libre de Bruxelles, University of Canterbury in New Zealand, European University Institute, University of Cambridge, Sciences Po Paris, University of Cologne, and University of Bologna.

Maurizio’s research is related mainly to EU external relations, particularly foreign aid and other development-related policies. He is also interested in European integration, international development, and Italy’s role in the international arena. He was local organiser of the 2014 ECPR General Conference in Glasgow and is a founding editor of the journal Contemporary Italian Politics (Taylor & Francis).
The European Consortium for Political Research

An independent scholarly association that supports the training, research and cross-national co-operation of political scientists

Events
Each year, the ECPR organises the Joint Sessions of Workshops, Summer and Winter Schools in Methods and Techniques, and the General Conference. A Graduate Student Conference was held in even years, until 2016.

Journals and book series
ECPR co-publishes four leading journals: European Political Science, European Journal of Political Research, European Political Science Review and the European Journal of International Relations. It also publishes the Comparative Politics book series, with Oxford University Press. This year sees the launch of a new Open Access journal, Political Research Exchange, published with Taylor & Francis.

ECPR Press
In 2005 the ECPR launched its own imprint: ECPR Press. The Press publishes high-quality Monographs and collections of Essays, along with a small selection of Classics that have made a significant contribution to political studies scholarship. Now published in partnership with Rowman & Littlefield International, the imprint also includes a highly respected series of multi-authored, edited volumes, Studies in European Political Science, many of which have developed from Workshops and Panels at ECPR events.

Standing Groups & Research Networks
These are groups of researchers, in many cases formed at ECPR events, with a shared scholarly interest. Some are small, maintaining only a website and mailing list; some organise major conferences and summer schools, and produce their own publications. There are currently over 50 Standing Groups, covering many sub-fields of the discipline. All are eligible to apply for grants to help with the running of summer schools and organisation of other major activities.

Prizes
Each year, the ECPR marks its members’ achievements by awarding a number of prizes. These prizes cover the spectrum of a scholar’s career, from the Jean Blondel PhD Prize to the Lifetime Achievement Award.

Membership
ECPR membership is institutional and is open to any university involved in the teaching or research of political science. Membership entitles staff and students at member institutions to benefits that include funding, reduced event fees and access to ECPR publications.

While membership is paid by the university, it is the individuals within it who receive the benefit; from Master’s and PhD students, through to the most senior professor.

The ECPR currently has some 340 institutional members worldwide. These include 47 of the top 50 European universities according to the QS World Rankings 2017. This figure has grown steadily over recent years, and equates to a network of some 26,000 political science scholars worldwide with MyECPR accounts.
The ECPR’s highest level of governance is its Council, comprised of one Official Representative from each member institution. Council performs a number of functions, including electing the ECPR’s Executive Committee (EC) every three years, receiving annual reports from the EC and voting on elements of constitutional reform. Council meets once a year, at the General Conference, and as such will meet this year in Hamburg on Friday between 18:00 and 19:00, in VMP 9 Lecture Hall.

Speaker of Council

The Speaker’s responsibilities include chairing Council meetings; proposing amendments to the Standing Orders of Council; liaising with the Executive Committee over business matters and the formulation of the agenda of Council meetings; serving as Senior Returning Officer for Executive Committee elections and votes on amending the ECPR Constitution; and being a general liaison point for members of Council vir-à-vir the ECPR.

Our newly elected Speaker is Thomas Poguntke, Chair of Comparative Politics and Director of the Düsseldorf Party Research Institute at Heinrich-Heine-Universität Düsseldorf (PRuF). Thomas will serve a three-year term.

ECPR Chair

The Chair is elected by the EC every three years coinciding with the changeover between Committees, and as such they serve a three-year term. The current Chair is Kris Deschouwer (Vrije Universiteit Brussel) who will serve until April 2021. The Chair takes the lead in the strategic direction of the organisation and works closely with the Vice Chair, as well as chairing meetings of the Executive Committee.

In recognition of the need to have a Chair experienced in ECPR business, in the preceding autumn the outgoing EC elects a Chair Designate from those members who have another three years to serve.

ECPR Director

In September 2013, Martin Bull (University of Salford) was appointed as the ECPR’s first Director. Martin oversees ECPR operations, and advises and assists the EC with the organisation’s strategic direction. He has considerable experience in ECPR matters, having served as its Academic Director 2006–2013, and on its Executive Committee 2003–2006.

The ECPR’s Executive Committee (EC) is a Board of twelve Trustees, elected by the Council of Official Representatives. The EC, which meets twice a year, is responsible for the day-to-day running of the ECPR, as well as its long-term development. To make this task more manageable, members are grouped into five portfolios covering the spectrum of ECPR’s work. Drawn from ECPR Full-Member institutions, EC members are elected for a six-year term, staggered so that six members are elected every three years.

Sustainable science

Universität Hamburg is committed to sustainable science and its faculties have taken great strides towards sustainability in research and teaching.

Excellent research

In 2007, the University established an educational centre for climate research and earth-systems science: KlimaCampus Hamburg, and in 2012, it founded the Hamburg Centre for Ultrafast Imaging, which aims to observe atomic motion in real time. Other key research areas include Matter and the Universe, Neurosciences, Multilingualism, Governance, Infection Research, Structural Biology and Heterogeneity and Education.

Broad academic spectrum

At Universität Hamburg, students can choose from approximately 170 degree programmes offered by the faculties of: Law; Business, Economics and Social Sciences; Medicine; Education; Humanities; Mathematics, Informatics and Natural Sciences; Psychology and Human Movement; and Business Administration.

The University also maintains numerous museums and collections such as the Zoological Museum, the Herbarium Hamburgense, the Geological-Paleontological Museum, the Botanical Garden and the Hamburger Sternwarte (observatory).

Brief history

Universität Hamburg was founded in 1919 on the initiative of Hamburg’s citizenry. Central founding figures include Senator Werner von Melle and the merchant Edmund Siemers.

Nobel Prize winners Otto Stern, Wolfgang Pauli, Isidor Rabi and Hans Jensen taught at the University, as did several major scientists including Ernst Cassirer, Erwin Panofsky, Aby Warburg, William Stern, Agathe Lasch, Magdalene Schoch, Emil Artin, Ralf Dahrendorf and Carl Friedrich von Weizsäcker.
Out and about in the city

Known as the ‘gateway to the world’ thanks to its bustling port, Germany’s second-largest city is an industrial gem

In addition to its historic attractions, ‘The Free and Hanseatic city of Hamburg’ remains an important financial centre, the seat of Germany’s oldest stock exchange and the world’s oldest merchant bank, Berenberg Bank.

The major regional broadcaster NDR, the printing and publishing firm Gruner + Jahr and newspapers Der Spiegel and Die Zeit are based in the city. Media, commercial, logistical, and industrial firms in the city include Airbus, Blohm + Voss, Aurubis, Beiersdorf, and Unilever.

In recent years, the city has played host to international political conferences and summits such as Europe and China and the G20. Former German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, who governed Germany for eight years, came from Hamburg.

The city is a major international and domestic tourist destination, with the Speicherstadt and Kontorhausviertel declared UNESCO World Heritage Sites in 2015. Hamburg can boast around 2,500 bridges – more than Venice and Amsterdam combined!

Among the city’s notable cultural venues are the Elbphilharmonie and Laeiszhalle concert halls. St. Paul’s Reeperbahn is among the best-known European entertainment districts. Hamburg’s harbour plays a crucial role in the identity of the city: it is the third-largest container handling port in Europe.

Top things to see and do

- Take a tour around the harbour, including Hamburg’s world-famous fish market
- Walk round the Speicherstadt – the world’s largest integrated complex of warehouses
- Explore the lively bars and clubs on the notorious Reeperbahn
- Book a guided tour of the spectacular modern Elbphilharmonie concert hall

European Political Science Prize

This £500 prize, generously supported by publishers Palgrave, is awarded to the author of an article in the journal European Political Science which contributes to the understanding of new trends in political science, or offers an innovative approach to teaching and learning in the discipline.

All EPS articles except reviews and keynotes are eligible for consideration.

The 2017 prize goes to Christopher L. Pallas and Charity Butcher of Kennesaw State University for their article Using dating as an analogy to teach IR theory.

Christopher and Charity had noticed how instructors often struggled to teach complex IR theories to their students. With this in mind, they devised a dating-scenario analogy, challenging students to explain and theorise a fictional couple’s behaviour in a way that could be transferred to an IR analysis of state behaviour.

In working through the exercise, students gain an intuitive understanding of core international relations theories that facilitates their subsequent learning.

From our prize jury

‘This is an innovative and novel way to encourage political science students to think about and engage with IR theory. We liked the presentation of the method in a recipe style, so that people can actually apply it, and the discussion is still fulfilling high standards; and the experience of dating is (somewhat) universal, so that students from different gendered, social and ethnic backgrounds can relate to it’.

Hedley Bull Prize in International Relations

This annual €2,000 award, named after the eminent Professor of IR, was instituted in 2017. It is awarded for a published monograph deemed a substantial and original contribution to theory and/or empirical studies in international relations.

The winner of the 2018 Prize is Simon Curtis (University of East Anglia), for his book Global Cities and Global Order (OUP 2016).

From our prize jury

‘Simon's book investigates the growing importance of global cities in international politics. Taking a longue durée approach, it shows how the rise of the global city is part of a wider process of global transformations in the state and the international system.

Drawing on different strands of academic literature – notably urban studies, political geography and international relations – this book represents a long overdue contribution on the crucial role of cities in the contemporary global political order, and it provides new avenues for further research on the link between cities and states in contemporary global governance.’
Rainer Forst delivers this year’s Plenary, entitled Normativity and Reality: Thinking Politically About Politics

It goes without saying that a scientific perspective on the social and political world has to be a realistic one. But what really is the reality political science has the task of explaining and understanding? Is it a reality of infinite antagonistic power struggles based on individual and collective interests – and thus any form of normativity supervenient on such interests and struggles? Or is it the other way around: do normative convictions and justifications ground the interests that individuals and collectives pursue? If this latter perspective is correct, power is generated in the discursive space of justifications, and the exercise of power depends on the capacity to rule the normative space of reasons for others. Yet if social and political reality is a reality of justifications, what distinguishes better justifications from worse ones – and what distinguishes different forms of exercising power?

Rainer Forst will discuss these issues and suggest some institutional conclusions that follow from these reflections.

Biographical note

Rainer Forst studied with Jürgen Habermas in Frankfurt and with John Rawls at Harvard. Forst received his PhD in Philosophy from Goethe University in 1993 with Kontexte der Gerechtigkeit (Suhrkamp, 1994; Engl. Contexts of Justice, University of California Press, 2002). Thereafter, he taught in Frankfurt and received his Habilitation with Toleranz im Konflikt (Suhrkamp, 2003, Engl. Tolerance in Conflict, Cambridge University Press 2013). In 2003, he received a Heisenberg Fellowship from the German Research Foundation. In 2005/06 he was the Theodor Heuss-Professor at the New School and since 2004 has been Professor of Political Theory and Philosophy in Frankfurt.

Since 2007, he has been co-director of the Research Cluster ‘The Formation of Normative Orders,’ a major interdisciplinary research centre funded by the German Excellence Initiative. He has also been a member of the founding directorate of the new Institute for Advanced Studies of Goethe-University at Bad Homburg near Frankfurt (where he is a Permanent Fellow) and is Director of the Research Center Justitia Amplificata based in Frankfurt. He is also Research Professor at the Berlin Social Science Center.

Rainer Forst’s Das Recht auf Rechtfertigung (Suhrkamp) appeared in 2007, published in 2012 as The Right to Justification (Columbia University Press). In 2009, he was Harris Distinguished Visiting Professor at Dartmouth College. In 2011, Kritik der Rechtfertigungsverhältnisse (Suhrkamp) (appeared Engl. 2013 from Polity Press as Justification and Critique). In 2013, he was a Noël Fellow at New York University. His Normativität und Macht (Suhrkamp 2015) was published by Oxford University Press as Normativity and Power.

Rainer Forst serves as Associate Editor of Ethics, is on the Executive Editorial Committee of Political Theory and the board of numerous international journals including European Journal of Political Theory and Contemporary Political Theory. He co-edits the series Theorie und Gesellschaft and Normative Orders (Campus Verlag).

In 2012, he received the Gottfried Wilhelm Leibniz Prize of the German Research Foundation, the highest honour awarded to German researchers. He is a Member of the Berlin Brandenburg Academy of Sciences and Humanities.

PRACTICALITIES

Getting around the city

Hamburg public transport is run by HVV. Tickets are valid for the metro, train, buses and some ferries. You can buy tickets on board buses but not on board the metro, train or ferries. We recommend buying tickets before travelling. There are vending machines at each station.

Ticket prices, maps and more at www.hvv.de/en

Metro

The metro operates on four colour-coded lines, and runs from approximately 04:30 to 01:00 the next morning. At weekends, the metro runs throughout the night.

U1 Norderstedt Mitte – Ohlstedt/Großhansdorf
U2 Niendorf Nord – Mümmelmannsberg
U3 Barmbek – Wandsbek-Gartenstadt
U4 Hafencity Universität – Mümmelmannsberg

Trains – S-Bahn

S-Bahn trains operates on six colour-coded lines: S1, S2, S3, S11, S21, S31.

S1 Wedel – Poppenbüttel (Hamburg Airport)
S2 Altona – Bergedorf
S3 Pinneberg – Stade
S11 Blankenese – Poppenbüttel
S21 Elbgaustraße/Altona – Aumühle
S31 Altona – Neugraben/Berliner Tor

City bikes

Available from over 200 stations around the city centre, these bikes are for short rides and to supplement public transport. To hire them, download the app StadtRAD Hamburg and register (5€ fee).

The first 30 minutes is free, then it’s 8 cents a minute thereafter.

Getting to the University from the Hauptbahnhof

The journey takes around 10 minutes by train/bus or 15 minutes by bike.

By S-Bahn train

Take S-Bahn train S21 or S31, direction Elbgaustraße or Altona. Alight at stop Dammtor.

Then take bus 4 or 5, direction Wildacker or Burgwedel. Alight at stop Universität/STAatsbibliothek, very near the AudiMax, where registration is taking place.

Alternatively, you can also walk from Dammtor station, which takes around 10 minutes (follow the marks).

By bus

Take bus 4 or 5, direction Wildacker or Burgwedel. Alight at bus stop Universität/STAatsbibliothek, very near the AudiMax, where registration is taking place.

Practical information

Got a question?

Ask a student helper in a red T-shirt!

Wi-fi

If you have an Eduroam account, this is the most reliable way to connect. Alternatively, use the wi-fi codes printed on the badges given to you when you registered.

Telephone / Emergency

International dialling code for Germany is +49. Ambulance / Fire 112, Police 110.

Money

Most banks are open 08:00–18:00 on weekdays, and closed at weekends. Cards are NOT accepted on campus, including in canteens.

There are several cashpoints on and around the campus. One is near the registration desk in the AudiMax at the entrance to the canteen.

Health

Find a pharmacy (Apotheke) on the second floor of the central station (Wandelhalle), open from 07:00–21:00 every day. On campus, the nearest pharmacy is at Grindelhof 71–73.

Tourist information

At www.hamburg-travel.com you can pre-order the Hamburg Card, giving you great savings on public transport, and discounts on more than 150 attractions. Pick up your pass from the tourist information at the Hauptbahnhof or at Dammtor train stop.

Food /drink on campus

Numerous cafeterias & coffee shops: www.studierendenwerk-hamburg.de

Black coffee – regular 1.20 €, tall 1.85 €; Coffee with milk – regular 1.45 €, tall 2.20 €. Canteens closed on Saturday, but several small stores and cafeterias are nearby, especially on Grindelallee, behind the campus.

Drinking water

German tap water is excellent. You can drink it from anywhere as long as nothing is stated to the contrary. We recommend you carry a refillable water bottle.

Tipping

6–10% is usual in restaurants / bars, if you are happy with the service.

Rising support for populist parties has disrupted the politics of many democratic societies. The Brexit vote and the electoral success of Donald Trump are the most visible consequences of this development. The retrogression of Turkish democracy looms large as well. But even if populists, most of the time right wing, are not successful at the ballot box, they impact heavily on national and international politics and have the power to shift politics in a more illiberal as well as isolationist direction. This is true of Marine le Pen as well as Gerd Wilders, to name just the latest right-wing non-winners of elections. In both countries, France and the Netherlands alike, we can easily observe how, for example, national values became more important in political discourse and how immigration policy clearly shifted to the right. And even Germany, which was free of a right-wing populist movement or party for a very long period of time, with the rise of the AfD has a successful newcomer in this corner of the political field.

The question of course is: What explains the successful establishment and in many cases persistence of those parties? What explains the push towards populism and the phenomenon of ‘democratic regression’? And are the explanations all the same for Poland and France, Great Britain and Germany, the Netherlands and the Scandinavian countries, for the United States of America and for countries like Turkey? Several theories attempt to answer this question. Some talk about economic insecurity as the main driver of the electoral success of right wing populists. Others broach the idea of a cultural backlash, entertaining the following line of thought: Some socio-cultural groups like white middle-aged men in the United States feel they have been neglected in political discourse and practice for too long. They now raise their voice and try to regain lost social and political ground. Another interpretation, close to the self-perception of those right-wing groups, asks whether this upheaval is due to a deep dissatisfaction with the ruling political elites. From a sociological perspective, one may ask whether we see the consequences of a new socio-structural cleavage. Throughout the postwar era, the cosmopolitan metropolises became more and more separate, economically as well as culturally, from the rather parochially inclined hinterlands. The metropolises are not only open to alternative lifestyles and the cohabitation of different cultures. Based on service and knowledge industries, their social fabric shifted away from traditional occupations towards social strata which thrive with and profit from globalisation. On the other hand, the hinterlands are more and more detached from progressive economic developments and at least to some extent jeopardised by the economic forces of globalisation. As a consequence, people there seem to develop attitudes that are very conservative socially and culturally, more isolationist, nationalistic and even antidemocratic.

This Roundtable seeks to explore this topic further, pitting against each other different interpretations of what we currently observe in elections and referenda throughout the established democracies, not to speak of the more recent democratic transformations. It will ask too, whether we are observing the beginning of a structurally based comprehensive democratic regression, or whether we see normal swings of attitudes in democracies that we need to learn to accept, and live with.

Multilateralism in Crisis:
The Re-Nationalisation of Governance and the Emergence of a Neo-Westphalian Order

Expanding in numbers and competences for most of the post-Cold-War era, multilateral governance institutions at the regional and global level have come under stress in recent years as member states and political movements within them increasingly seek to redefine their jurisdictions, to repatriate some or all regulatory competences to the nation-state, or to recalibrate the exercise of their decision-making authority.

The exit of the United Kingdom from the European Union may be the most prominent example of this development, but similar trends are observable across regions, institutions, and issue areas: The current US administration has thrown into doubt the United States’ commitment to various governance arrangements, including NAFTA, the WTO, and the UN; Latin American states have been assembling under the roof of UNASUR, an organisation that makes even less pretensions to becoming a supranational organisation than did its precursors in the region; several African states are withdrawing from the International Criminal Court while members of the South African Development Community have significantly curtailed the jurisdiction of the SADC tribunal after it had forayed into sensitive political territory in one of its very first cases; and with respect to the European Court of Human Rights, member states have moved to enshrine the principle of the margin of appreciation that foregrounds state discretion formally in the European Convention on Human Rights. Last but not least, nationalist parties and political movements that are at best critical, at worst hostile to existing forms of governance beyond the state have been in ascendance across countries and continents.

Some adjustments to the design and operation of international regimes as well as some fluctuation in the membership of international organisations has always taken place and is not per se inimical to global governance, but the cumulation of political positions the world over that express a preference for building back the existing governance architecture to unshackle nation-states, at least in part, from what are perceived as undue interferences with national sovereignty is a development that has become particularly noticeable over the last decade.

This Roundtable will address the causes and consequences of this move away from multilateralism and towards greater emphasis again on the role of the nation-state as the principal unit of decision-making, for problems arising within states as well as for externalities that affect neighbouring states and, possibly, the globe.
Many of us care about teaching. We invest in developing good courses, staying up to date with innovative teaching methods, and redesigning course materials to reflect new developments and outcomes of scholarly research. But what role does (good) teaching play in advancing a political scientist’s academic career? How can we take teaching seriously, and still ensure there is enough time for research and publishing? How can we care seriously about our students, while not carrying the burden of constant overtime?

In this Roundtable, we bring together a mix of early-career, mid-career, and established academics from different national higher education backgrounds (ensuring a good mix of gender, experience and geographical origin) to discuss the role teaching could (and should) play in our academic self-understanding. We want to discuss the increasing trend to distinguish between research and teaching job profiles, and how to react to higher education systems, where university administrations talk about the importance of teaching, but then hire according to publication records. We also want to reflect on the responsibility of our community in these trends.

The Roundtable’s aim is not to come up with definite answers to those questions, but to provide a platform for those questions that many of us are struggling with. We want to raise awareness of the different positions, strategies and trajectories that successful academics choose. And we want to show our colleagues’ differing experiences and views by providing a platform to a variety of speakers who, throughout their careers, have demonstrated that they are excellent scientists who care also about teaching.

Political Communication in a Post-truth Era: Much Ado About Nothing?

According to political observers the ‘truth’ has had a hard time in recent political developments. From Brexiteers proclaiming that they’ve had enough of experts, to fake news seemingly propagated by those at both ends of the political spectrum, to so-called ‘alternative facts’ proliferated by the Trump administration, many commentators propose that we now live in times of post-truth politics. Moreover, it appears that public scrutiny has shifted from politicians to traditional media, who face harsh resentment from enraged citizens, such as German Pegida-followers shouting Lügenpresse at German mainstream media.

Populists are increasingly gaining support; and mainstream politicians fear that the media contribute to the polarisation of politics and society. Social media in particular is accused of nourishing so-called echo chambers in which citizens are no longer exposed to diverse opinions or objective news.

On the other hand, investigative journalism in particular continues to have a highly respected position in society, and is still considered an authoritative voice, as, for instance, the considerable rise in subscriptions to the New York Times or the Washington Post in 2017 suggests. Moreover, democratic protests for press freedom in countries such as the US, Poland and Hungary offer evidence of societal resistance against the institutionalisation of post-truth politics.

With a view to the forthcoming major elections around the world, in particular the 2018 midterm elections in the US, and the 2019 European parliamentary elections, these developments are thus of high societal and academic relevance. However, critics of the post-truth thesis warn not to overemphasise apparent effects on political behaviour, and provide counter-evidence to the alleged trends by asking alternative questions such as:

Is fake news indeed a new and global phenomenon?

Are these worries mainly fuelled by the fear of economic survival by the (mainstream) media themselves?

And, are individual citizens indeed less likely to be exposed to diverse opinions and, respectively, more likely to be misinformed; or are individuals nowadays not more entrapped in so-called ‘filter bubbles’ than before?

These and many more questions will be addressed during this Roundtable, in which scholars of political communication and journalism discuss the latest developments with respect to post-truth politics, scrutinise its effects, and analyse implications for future research.

Words of Violence: Analysing Daesh’s Dabiq Magazine through the Lens of Radicalisation Theory

Political behaviour is an essential element of political culture of the population and an important indicator and predictor of the democratic political system development. In one of its broadest definitions, political behaviour is considered as an aggregated category for all those actions of private citizens by which they seek to influence – select, support or challenge – government and politics. This influence can be realised either directly by affecting the decision-making process or the course implementation of public policy, or indirectly – by participating in the nomination of the group of people who will make those decisions and policies. The range of concrete actions which can be defined as political behaviour varies from voting in national elections to organising a demonstration, from writing a letter to a governmental official to establishing an online protest-community. Some forms of political participation, like voting, are among most traditional and have existed for many centuries while those which presume using the resources of the internet and social media are relatively new and evolving.

Development of comparative surveys in political science in the recent three decades has contributed to the establishment of an extensive empirical database in this field including such large-scale research programs as Eurobarometer, European Social Survey, International Social Survey Program, World Values Survey, European Values Study, Comparative National Elections Project, Comparative Study of Electoral System as well as the group of regional barometers – Afro Barometer, Arab Barometer, Asian Barometer, Eurasia Barometer, and Latinobarometro.

The Panel includes Papers analysing available empirical evidence from these and other quantitative research programs describing patterns, factors and consequences of political behaviour in different world regions and in a global comparative perspective. The main question which the Panel is focusing on is how we can use data and empirical evidence to deepen our understanding and prediction skills with regard to different forms of political behaviour and the role of values and norms in shaping participation patterns.

Tracking Inclusion in Political Science: The Role of the International Political Science Association

To mark the 2018 release of the third Gender and Diversity Monitoring Report of the International Political Science Association, this Panel reflects on contemporary issues relating to gender and diversity in the discipline of political science from both an international and comparative perspective.

The twentieth century saw the advent of the formal organisation of the discipline into professional associations, as well as the rise of new social movements such as those promoting gender and racial equality and indigenous rights.

Political science was sometimes slow to engage with these new political actors and with issues of inequality more generally. Today, many questions and challenges remain.

To what extent is the discipline of political science, including its professional associations, inclusive and representative in terms of focus and composition?

What practices have professional associations or other institutions of political science adopted to foster diversity, and what lessons can be learned from these?

Is the discipline accommodating diverse perspectives and approaches or is there still a hierarchy of knowledge favouring particular Global North frameworks and preoccupations?

This Panel, comprising the authors of IPSA’s 2018 Gender and Diversity Monitoring Report, and leading experts, reflect on these questions from national and global perspectives.

MyECPR housekeeping: help us help you!

Please keep your institution and email address up to date. That way, we don’t waste members’ money trying to contact dormant accounts, and you won’t miss out on early-bird bargains. In the 21st century, populism is sweeping the world. Populist leaders are in power in the most powerful country on the globe, the United States of America. They form governments in regional hubs such as Poland, the Philippines and Venezuela, and they threaten some of the most established Western Democracies, including France and Italy. Yet populism is not only a very successful contemporary political movement; it might also fundamentally alter how we teach political science.

How should populism be integrated into an International Relations, Comparative Politics, or Women’s Studies class? How should it be taught? How does it change how we as political scientists see the world, and how does it alter the main political science theories and approaches?

We will discuss these questions with four leading scholars, each of whom gives a sub-disciplinary perspective.

Since the ECPR’s establishment in 1970, publishing research in political science and political thought has been one of its key activities, initially through journals for the profession, and subsequently with the launch of several specialised book series in collaboration with academic publishers.

In 2005 the ECPR launched its own imprint, ECPR Press, offering high-quality Monographs from young scholars and republishing out-of-print Classics that had made a significant contribution to political studies.

Since then, the Press has expanded its scope, publishing Monographs by established scholars which had already appeared in languages other than English; and printing several volumes of general interest to the profession. In 2011 two new series were added: Studies in European Political Science and Essays.

ECPR Press now publishes original research from leading political scientists and the best young scholars in the discipline. Its scope extends to all fields of political science, international relations and political thought, without restriction in approach or regional focus. The Press is also open to interdisciplinary work with a predominant political dimension.

In 2017, the Press entered into a publishing partnership with Rowman & Littlefield International.

Political Research Exchange (PRX)
Published in association with Taylor & Francis

PRX offers a dynamic platform to advance research, innovation and debate across political science. It welcomes theoretical, methodological, and empirical contributions from all fields, including comparative politics, international politics/international relations, political communication, political sociology, political thought, public administration, and interdisciplinary work with a predominantly political dimension.

Published online with Gold Open Access and swift publication times, its digital format deepens and enriches scholarly communication. With significant subsidies on the normal upfront costs of Open Access, PRX signals a commitment by ECPR to forging a cogent path for the research community at this crucial juncture in academic publishing.

PDY is published as a double issue at the end of each volume of EJPR. It is also online as a fully searchable and downloadable data source (PDYi, pictured) that includes election results, national referenda, changes in government and institutional reforms in 36 countries including all EU member states. Experts on the politics of each country provide commentary on the data, and on the principal issues in national politics.

EPS is the professional journal of the ECPR; it publishes pieces on how the discipline is, can, and ought to be. Articles address research and professional matters, doctoral training provision and teaching, as well as relations between academia and politicians, policymakers, journalists and ordinary citizens. EPS also includes more substantive pieces that provide a political science perspective on important current events, review articles and symposia.

Boost your skills at the ECPR Methods School

The ECPR’s Winter and Summer Schools in Methods and Techniques offer world-leading training in research methods for political science and neighbouring disciplines.

Good research requires a solid methodology; a belief key to the aims of the ECPR and the reason for the creation of its Methods School. Launched in 2006, the ECPR’s Summer School in Methods and Techniques quickly established itself as a leading event of its kind, paving the way for the first Winter School, in 2011.

More than 745 participants from across Europe and beyond have attended the last two Methods School events (the 2017 Summer School and 2018 Winter School). Besides a majority of PhD students, participants include a growing proportion of postdoctoral researchers and tenure-track or more senior scholars.

Holistic training
The School’s philosophy is to offer up-to-date training across the whole range of methodologies, and across different paradigms and approaches. By combining the Winter and Summer School, researchers can follow a diverse training track of introductory and advanced courses, in various formats.

Salient methods
Delivered by experienced Instructors and supported by dedicated Teaching Assistants, the School gives researchers the methodological skills they need at different stages of their career, while a lively plenary programme encompassing free course tasters, poster sessions, and the popular ‘brown bag’ events, complement the academic components.

Covering methods particularly salient for research in political science, the School caters to the needs of research at macro and micro levels. Courses cover quantitative and qualitative designs, and positivist and interpretative perspectives.

The Methods School involves intensive courses and lab sessions, which require a strong commitment from participants.

Certification
ECTS Credits are granted on completion of the courses, and if you attend at least eighty per cent of course hours, the ECPR can issue a Certificate of Attendance.
Meet the Academic Convenors

Benoît Rihoux has taught comparative methods in institutions across the world. He is involved in numerous research projects on topics of specialisation (political parties, social movements, organisational change) as well as crises, community conflicts, national and European policies, organisational innovation, environmental risks, natural resource management, and policy evaluation.

Levente (Levi) Littvay is Associate Professor of Political Science at Central European University (Budapest), an internationally renowned research university with strong methods expertise.

Derek Beach is Associate Professor of Political Science at the University of Aarhus, where he teaches international relations and methodology. He has published on international negotiations, referendums, and European integration. His books include "Process-tracing Methods: Foundations and Guidelines" and "Causal Case Studies: Foundations and Guidelines for Comparing, Matching and Tracing."

Location, location

Following a three-year residency at the University of Vienna, in 2015 the Winter School moved to the Bamberg Graduate School of Social Sciences in Germany, where it is set to remain until 2020.

The Summer School takes place every July/August. Following a hugely successful ten years at the University of Ljubljana, from 2016 the event began a three-year residency at Central European University (Budapest).

Panel on open scholarship

WEDNESDAY 22ND AUGUST
17.00-18.00, VMP5 LHB1

How is open scholarship shaping the future of academia?
Come and hear our panel of experts discuss what open scholarship means for researchers, editors, and their publishers worldwide.

Political Research Exchange (PRX) reception

WEDNESDAY 22ND AUGUST
18.00-20.00, VMP5 0079

Sponsored by Routledge, Taylor & Francis Group

Join us directly after the panel on open scholarship to celebrate the official launch of the ECPR’s new open access journal, Political Research Exchange (PRX).
This is the ideal opportunity to connect with the editors, learn more about the journal, and find out how you can take advantage of our introductory publishing charge waiver. Refreshments will be provided.

Can’t make it?
Visit the Routledge booth in the Exhibitions space or go to bit.ly/introducing-PRX to find out more.

The Palgrave International Handbook of Football and Politics

Editors: Jean-Michel De Waele, Suzan Gibril, Ekaterina Gloriozova, Ramón Spaaij

This Handbook offers an analysis of the relation between football and politics, based on over 30 case studies covering five continents. It provides a detailed picture of this relation in a wide number of European, American, African, and Asian states, as well as a comparative assessment of football in a global perspective, thus combining the general and the local. It examines themes such as the political origins of football in the studied country, the historical club rivalries, the political aspects of football as a sports spectacle, and the contemporary issues linked to the political use of football.

Palgrave Studies in Presidential Politics

Series Editors: Robert Elgie, Gianluca Passarelli

Palgrave Studies in Presidential Politics publishes books on all aspects of presidential politics. The history of presidential offices and presidential biographies. The series focuses on presidents throughout the world, including both directly elected and indirectly elected presidents, both single-country and comparative studies of presidential politics. It also includes volumes on conceptual or theoretical aspects, such as how to measure presidential power. Moreover, the series considers book projects on the reform of presidential politics, e.g. the reform of presidential elections.

Doctoral students are an integral part of the MPIfG’s research environment. The institute is home to the International Max Planck Research School on the Social and Political Constitution of the Economy (IMPRS-SPCE), which is run jointly by the MPIfG and the University of Cologne. Offering excellent research conditions and a doctoral program focusing on economic sociology and comparative political economy, the School prepares outstanding graduate students for a career in academia.

The Max Planck Sciences Po Center on Coping with Instability in Market Societies (MaxPo) is a Franco-German research center. The Center’s research investigates how individuals, organizations, and nation-states are coping with the new forms of economic and social instability that have developed in Western societies. Located at Sciences Po Paris and cooperating closely with the MPIfG, the Center aims to contribute substantially to the social sciences in Europe and to enrich academic and political dialogue between France and Germany.
